PASTOR'S CORNER

My Dear Family,

Do not be jealous of the blessings that others have received. Instead, rejoice in their blessing while seeing your own strength in having not needed that same blessing. Many of us can fall into the trap of thinking that all blessings are indicative of God's favor, as if you will only be blessed if your faith is strong enough. Quite the opposite. When we see others blest as we go on struggling, it is a sign of our strength. God blesses those who need his assistance in their desire for a holy life. Some require greater blessings than others in order to achieve the same level of sanctity. But those who lack blessing in this present life should remember the beatitudes, that they will receive their reward in the life to come. As for those greatly blest in this life, remember in all humility that God has granted you those blessings out of mercy, and that we should in turn share our blessings with one another.
